After the Rancho San Rafael was divided, Benjamin Dreyfus was awarded the hilly area north of downtown Los Angeles known as Eagle Rock Valley. By 1911, this farming community had rapidly grown into a city. The Los Angeles Railway made downtown LA a trolley ride away, and continued growth led to Eagle Rock's consolidation with the city in 1923. Today, Eagle Rock is one of LA's most distinctive neighborhoods, and a pride instilled by early settlers remains here. These inspirational settlers include soldier and rancho Jose Maria Verdugo, diarist and historian Elena Frackelton Murdock, farmer and amateur hydrologist Mayor Cromwell Galpin and publicist Ann Hare Harrison. Join editors Eric H. Warren and Frank F. Parrello as they profile the bedrock personalities who built Eagle Rock.

Is there really such a thing as a "good divorce"? Determined to uncover the truth, Elizabeth Marquardt—herself a child of divorce—conducted, with Professor Norval Glenn, a pioneering national study of children of divorce, surveying 1,500 young adults from both divorced and intact families between 2001 and 2003. In Between Two Worlds, she weaves the findings of that study together with powerful, unsentimental stories of the childhoods of young people from divorced families. The hard truth, she says, is that while divorce is sometimes necessary, even amicable divorces sow lasting inner conflict in the lives of children. When a family breaks in two, children who stay in touch with both parents must travel between two worlds, trying alone to reconcile their parents' often strikingly different beliefs, values, and ways of living. Authoritative, beautifully written, and alive with the voices of men and women whose lives were changed by divorce, Marquardt's book is essential reading for anyone who grew up "between two worlds." "Makes a persuasive case against the culture of casual divorce." —Washington Post "A poignant narrative of her own experience . . . Marquardt says she and other young adults who grew up in the divorce explosion of the 1970s and 1980s are still dealing with wounds that they could never talk about with their parents."—Chicago Tribune

Have kids, will travel aims to encourage parents with children of all ages to carry on travelling independently rather than put their travelling lifestyle on hold. I have often heard the phrase: "we travelled a lot before the children." I wanted to challenge this perception and prove it can be done with some foresight and planning, using my experiences as an example. Often, when I have travelled with children, I have been challenged by people who cite the cost and inconvenience as a barrier to travelling with young families. This was one of the main motivations which inspired me to prove that this way of travelling is achievable at a relatively low cost without compromising your budget or your holiday. This book gives a taste of various unforgettable experiences that can be had with your children in a wide range of locales across the globe covering a period of thirty years. I encountered many challenges relating to the period and changing age of the children. With the ever-changing global political landscape, some of the countries listed in this book are less safe than they were before. However, I would like to stress that today it is easier and safer to travel to more places than ever before. These journeys and experiences showcased in this book show that this kind of travel is doable and meaningful. Nowadays, travel has become ever more convenient and secure thanks to today's technology being at our fingertips. With so much opportunity, I believe travelling with children can be immensely rewarding and broadens the mind of young children and adults alike and this "unconventional" style of travelling should be regarded as not only doable but also highly encouraged.
