 historic events! 1918, Russian Civil War.
 The entire Gold Reserve of the Russian Empire vanishes without a trace. But what if it's about to resurface? And what if it's about to be used to shift the global balance of power? Today: The world's largest treasure; dangerous adventure; forbidden passion, defying time and space; conspiracy that threatens to plunge the country into darkness. International journalist, wife and mom, Jade Snow, travels to Russia to reconnect with the country of her ancestors and investigate tantalizing mystery of the Gold Train. What she doesn't know is that she is about to land in the midst of a deadly conspiracy threatening to change the fate of one of the world's most powerful nations, and that she is destined to meet a mysterious stranger who will change her life forever. As her only Russian friend gets murdered, Jade finds herself embroiled in a net of intrigue, glamour and alien ideals on these strange and unfamiliar shores. On top of that, she becomes more popular than she'd ever bargained for. So popular, in fact, that it could be hazardous to her health. And she deals with this dangerous and unwanted popularity in a way that is guaranteed to surprise even the most seasoned reader. Refusing to be a pawn in a struggle of forces beyond her control, Jade must choose between her worst friends and best enemies... and the future of the world just might depend on her choice!

Dandy Dan McCracken is a rogue wandering around eastern Pennsylvania and living by his wits in the middle years of the American Revolution. Through circumstance, he becomes a spy. Wounded and on the run from a sheriff, he's rescued and nursed back to health by the lovely ward of Benedict Arnold's procurement officer in Philadelphia. McCracken is enamored of the girl, but when her husband returns from the American front, he flees and falls in with a band of British spies. He switches sides again when he discovers his conscience as a result of falling in love, and not because he favors one side over the other. His actions now – not through choice but again through circumstance – make him a hero.

The Accidental Spy By The Vine Press

In this second installment of the hilarious Nathan Abercrombie, Accidental Zombie series by popular author David Lubar, fifth-grader Nathan Abercrombie becomes the world's first zombie spy. Nathan Abercrombie is getting used to his rotten life as a half-dead zombie. The good thing is he doesn't feel any pain. The bad thing is his body can't heal, so he has to be really careful not to break anything. But that's hard to do when his wrestling-obsessed gym teacher, Mr. Lomux, matches him up with Rodney the bully, who's looking for any excuse to break his bones. Then one day, Nathan is approached by the secret organization B.U.M.—aka the Bureau of Useful Misadventures—which offers him a cure in exchange for his help. Nathan jumps at the chance to become the world's first zombie spy, but soon discovers that B.U.M. isn't quite what it seems. Can Nathan trust them? BETSY ROSS: ACCIDENTAL SPY iUniverse

Jared Choe thought he was going to be able to make a new discovery and help humanity with a discovery in Bio-tech using Nano-bots. Giving the ability to change things about peoples appearance and even helping repair what medicine couldn't. His discovery thrust him into a world of danger and intrigue in this book one of the 'Accidental Spy', a new series. Excerpt Have you ever wondered how you ended up in a situation? I often do, with the turn of events that my life has taken I think back to simpler days working on my masters in Bio-tech engineering at M. I. T. Looking in the rear-view mirror as I speed down the M-5 to see if I'm still being followed. I pause briefly as I catch sight of myself, a red-haired bomb shell with full lips, small upturned nose, and emerald green eyes. I didn't always look this way though. I was born Jared Choe, a first-generation Japanese-American all-star. By the age of fifteen I had graduated high school and been accepted to M. I. T. on a full scholarship. My parents wanted me to be a doctor, I wanted to be a programmer so we compromised and I became a bio-tech engineer. I had a promising career in the field and several companies were trying to lure me in with promises of full funding and grants once I finished my Master's degree. While working on my final project for school my world got turned upside down and I was thrust into a world that I thought only existed in movies. Let me go back to the beginning and get you caught up. As I said I was working on a project that would revolutionize medicine, nano-tech. Not any ordinary nano-tech that could be out there. I was taking a page from Gene Rodenberry, The Outer Limits, and any other science fiction you could think of to make something extraordinary. I was working with the smallest nano-bots that had been created, up until this point they could be programmed, placed in the body, do their thing, and then retrieved from a pre-programmed spot then reused later. I was making a nano-bot that could be left in the body and programmed by an RFID chip inserted in the skin. This way they could be used in any number of applications over the course of someone life. There were even possible applications for the military and intelligence fields.

 Not everything is beautiful in Tabriz, as Greg Armstrong starts to discover. After witnessing a covert military operation, the dark underworld of international terrorism begins to engulf him. Only the strange expatriate community of Sabah stands between him and the Security Police. Review A web of espionage and intrigue played out against the gritty background of the Tabrizi oil fields. I loved the antediluvian world of Tabriz, and the variety of characters drawn to work in this bizarre domain. --John Singe, author of My Island Home
