Careers in astronomy for women (as in other sciences) were a rarity in Britain and Ireland until well into the twentieth century. The book investigates the place of women in astronomy before that era, recounted in the form of biographies of about 25 women born between 1650 and 1900 who in varying capacities contributed to its progress during the eighteenth, nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. There are some famous names among them whose biographies have been written before now, there are others who have received less than their due recognition while many more occupied inconspicuous and sometimes thankless places as assistants to male family members. All deserve to be remembered as interesting individuals in an earlier opportunity-poor age. Placed in roughly chronological order, their lives constitute a sample thread in the story of female entry into the male world of science. The book is aimed at astronomers, amateur astronomers, historians of science, and promoters of women in science, but being written in non-technical language it is intended to be of interest also to educated readers generally.

Smart About Cities Hachette Tourisme
In this debut memoir, a James Beard Award-winning writer, whose childhood idea of fine dining was Howard Johnson's, tells how he became one of Paris's most influential food critics Until Alec Lobrano landed a job in the glamorous Paris office of Women's Wear Daily, his main experience of French cuisine was the occasional supermarket éclair. An interview with the owner of a renowned cheese shop for his first article nearly proves a disaster because he speaks no French. As he goes on to cover celebrities and couturiers and improves his mastery of the language, he gradually learns what it means to be truly French. He attends a cocktail party with Yves St. Laurent and has dinner with Giorgio Armani. Over a superb lunch, it's his landlady who ultimately provides him with a lasting touchstone for how to judge food: "you must understand the intentions of the cook." At the city's brasseries and bistros, he discovers real French cooking. Through a series of vivid encounters with culinary figures from Paul Bocuse to Julia Child to Ruth Reichl, Lobrano hones his palate and finds his voice. Soon the timid boy from Connecticut is at the epicenter of the Parisian dining revolution and the restaurant critic of one of the largest newspapers in the France. A mouthwatering testament to the healing power of food, My Place at the Table is a moving coming-of-age story of how a gay man emerges from a wounding childhood, discovers himself, and finds love. Published here for the first time is Lobrano's "little black book," an insider's guide to his thirty all-time-favorite Paris restaurants.

Bibliophiles in Europe at the end of the nineteenth century began to take a serious interest in the manuscripts of the Middle East and the paper on which they were written. Perhaps the most important of these men were C.-M. Briquet working in Geneva, and J. Wiesner and J. von Karabacek working in Vienna. All three were concerned with the burning topic of the moment: Was oriental paper made of cotton? Within the space of two years these three writers published seminal articles for the European study of Arab paper. Das Arabische Papier is one of those articles. The late Don Baker's inspiration to set about the translation and interpretation of this work was 'simply the desire to know the contents of this much quoted article'. Students, historians, curators, collectors, conservators and all those interested in the historical development and spread of papermaking will realise why Don Baker wished to make this important text available to English readers. This Archetype edition is a revised edition of the volume, which Don Baker produced in 1991.

Qui en veut à Eugénie Brazier, la célèbre cuisinière lyonnaise qui, en cette année 1933, vient d'obtenir deux fois trois étoiles pour chacun de ses restaurants ? Malheureux hasards, plaisanteries de mauvais goût ? On peut le penser jusqu'à la mort d'un cuisinier et la tentative d'empoisonnement d'Édouard Herriot, le maire de Lyon. Bien malgré lui, Adrien Savoisy va mener l'enquête. Rongé par l'inquiétude pour sa compagne Rebecca, retenue dans une prison du nouveau chancelier d'Allemagne, Adolf Hitler, il n'a guère la tête à la bonne chère. Entraîné par une jeune cuisinière issue de la communauté arménienne de Lyon et un célèbre criminologue, gastronome averti, il va, malgré tout, se lancer aux trousses du coupable. Volaille demi-deuil, poulet à la crème aux morilles, filet de charolais Rossini, langouste belle aurore et autres quenelles au gratin vont être au cœur de leurs investigations dans la « capitale de la gastronomie ».

Taking a comparative perspective, it reflects on the experience of France, Germany, Austria, Russia, Britain, Italy and Russia, and points to significant similarities and differences. With the aim of projecting alternative and sustainable forms of urbanism, the book asks: What are the key principles of an ecological urbanism? How might they be organized? And what role might design and planning play in the process? While climate change, sustainable architecture, and green technologies have become increasingly topical, issues surrounding the sustainability of the city are much less developed. The premise of the book is that an ecological approach is urgently needed both as a remedial device for the contemporary city and an organizing principle for new cities. Ecological urbanism approaches the city without any one set of instruments and with a worldview that is fluid in scale and disciplinary approach. Design provides the synthetic key to connect ecology with an urbanism that is not in contradiction with its environment. The book brings together design practitioners and theorists, economists, engineers, artists, policy makers, environmental scientists, and public health specialists, with the goal of reaching a more robust understanding of ecological urbanism and what it might be in the future. Contributors include: Homi Bhabha, Stefano Boeri, Chuck Hoberman, Rem Koolhaas, Sanford Kwinter, Bruno Latour, Nina-Marie Lister, Moshen Mostafavi, Matthias Schuler, Sissel Tolaas, Charles Waldheim

Can there be more than one reality at a time, and can we experience them both? These were the questions that led photographer and former psychology professor Allan I. Teger to create this collection of black and white Bodyscapes(R). At first glance, Bodyscapes appear to be landscapes; a second look shows that they are in fact nude bodies with small toys and miniatures set on them. Spanning a 35-year period, this collection shows more than 110 black and white images photographed in a single exposure without any post processing or manipulation. The body becomes the setting for golfing, skiing, mountain climbing, surfing, and other sports. Other images feature landscapes ranging from rolling farmlands to beaches and outer space. They are fun, beautiful, and sensual, but always in good taste. This elegant portfolio of Teger's images is an ideal, reality-bending addition to any art photography library.

The New York Times bestseller! When Bernie Sanders began his race for the presidency, it was considered by the political establishment and the media to be a "fringe" campaign, something not to be taken seriously. After all, he was just an Independent senator from a small state with little name recognition. His campaign had no money, no political organization, and it was taking on the entire Democratic Party establishment. By the time Sanders's campaign came to a close, however, it was clear that the pundits had gotten it wrong. Bernie had run one of the most consequential campaigns in the modern history of the country. He had received more than 13 million votes in primaries and caucuses throughout the country, won twenty-two states, and more than 1.4 million people had attended his public meetings. Most important, he showed that the American people were prepared to take on the greed and irresponsibility of corporate America and the 1 percent. In Our Revolution, Sanders shares his personal experiences from the campaign trail, recounting the details of his historic primary fight and the people who made it possible. And for the millions looking to continue the political revolution, he outlines a progressive economic, environmental, racial, and social justice agenda that will create jobs, raise wages, protect the environment, and provide health care for all—and ultimately transform our country and our world for the better. For him, the political revolution has just started. The campaign may be over, but the struggle goes on.

Les classes dirigeantes françaises, confrontées à un peuple jugé trop rétif, ont pris au 19e siècle l'habitude de s'appuyer sur des homologues étrangères, plus puissantes et plus sûres d'elles. Au siècle suivant, elles ont opté tour à tour ou conjointement pour leurs partenaires d'Allemagne et des États-Unis. À l'été 1940, au terme d'une décennie de crise, triompha avec Vichy le tutorat allemand qu'elles avaient mûrement préparé. C'est leur « Collaboration » politico-policière avec le Reich vainqueur, règlement de comptes contre une partie importante de la population, qui est étudiée ici : cette alliance, toujours mortifère, ne se bornait pas à ceux qui occupent en général le devant de la scène, les spécialistes étatiques de la répression, les hommes de main ou les collaborationnistes de plume toujours associés aux crimes. L'attachement durable des classes dirigeantes françaises au tuteur allemand et au tandem Laval-Pétain, qu'elles avaient choisi dès 1934, se prolongea souvent jusqu'à la libération de Paris. Il n'affecta cependant ni l'excellence de leur information ni leur extrême sensibilité au rapport de forces militaires, qui balaya dès l'été 1941, avec la mort du Blitzkrieg à l'Est, leur certitude initiale d'une victoire allemande durable sur le continent européen. Cette réalité dicta leur ralliement à la Pax Americana, du grand capital financier aux chefs militaires et au haut clergé, ralliement aussi spectaculaire qu'ignoré des foules : endosser « les habits neufs de la collaboration » permettrait de maintenir intact le statu quo. L'objectif semblait à portée de main quand les Américains promurent, en débarquant en Afrique du Nord en novembre 1942, leurs protégés Darlan et Giraud. D'ordinaire simple formalité pour le capital financier, la question du pouvoir politique pour l'après- Libération se transforma pourtant en brûlot. De Gaulle n'aimait pas la tutelle américaine plus que l'allemande et n'était pas disposé à céder l'Empire : élites françaises et Américains le détestèrent en chœur bien qu'il n'eût jamais été un modèle de subversion et fût entouré dès l'origine de « gens très bien ». Comme il était soutenu par le peuple français, très au-delà de sa mouvance, décideurs français et américains durent, à contrecœur, s'en accommoder...

Nora M. Alter reveals the essay film to be a hybrid genre that fuses the categories of feature, art, and documentary film. Like its literary predecessor, the essay film draws on a variety of forms and approaches; in the process, it fundamentally alters the shape of cinema. The Essay Film After Fact and Fiction locates the genre's origins in early silent cinema and follows its transformation with the advent of sound, its legitimation in the postwar period, and its multifaceted development at the turn of the millennium. In addition to exploring the broader history of the essay film, Alter addresses the innovative ways contemporary artists such as Martha Rosler, Isaac Julien, Harun Farocki, John Akomfrah, and Hito Steyerl have taken up the essay film in their work.
