As the application of biotechnology, many drugs containing
protein or peptides
have been developed in the pharmaceutical field. Accurate
quantitation of
peptides and proteins
is of great importance in quality control of these drugs.

Determination of
using spectroscopic
methods is mainly based on the absorption of three
aromatic amino acids:
Tryptophan, Tyrosine
and Phenylalanine. -- Tryptophan has been studied most, due to the relatively higher
extinction coefficient.
In this study,
spectroscopic
characteristics of Tyrosine and Phenylalanine were
studied using UV, CD
and Fluorescence
spectrometers. -- CD
and UV monitored pH
titration of Tyrosine
and Phenylalanine was carried out using a Chirascan
spectrometer. Cuvettes
with different path
lengths were used due to the different extinction coefficients
at different wavelength regions. pKa of both the two amino acids were determined. -- Excitation and emission spectra of serial dilutions of Phenylalanine were measured on a fluorimeter using 10mm, 4mm and 2mm. By decreasing the pathlength from 10mm to 2mm. The inner filter effects were reduced, allowing for the effective measurement of concentrations of up to 1.475mg/mL. -- Measurement of fluorescence was also carried out on a Chirascan spectrometer. By using the Fluorescence mode of the Chirascan, the inner filter effect was removed and an almost ideal relationship between fluorescence and absorbance was obtained.

First in the historical mystery series featuring a sophisticated sleuth in Jazz Age Greenwich Village! Everyone who's anyone in 1920s New York knows Bedford Green. Once a merciless gossip columnist, he has given up the life of sleaze and secrets and decamped for the Village—to open a gritty little art gallery showcasing the most shocking European artists imaginable. The gallery is a money pit, and Green is in debt to some of the roughest loan sharks south of 14th Street, but that doesn't stop him from looking fabulous or having a good time. He's happy hanging around Manhattan society—at least until his assistant starts to cry. Sloane is a modern woman, a flapper with a razor-sharp bob and a bulletproof heart, but she's convinced that her friend Polly Swanscott is in danger. From the speakeasies of the Village to the finest cafes in Paris, Green will do his best to save Polly—and he'll do it with a cocktail in hand . . . The Weeping Woman is the first book in the Bedford Green Mysteries, but you may enjoy reading the series in any order.

This book documents in letters, photos, and paintings a special friendship between two highly creative individuals who helped shape Chinese culture in the twentieth century --- the revered traditional painter Huang Binhong (1865-1955) and the young, cosmopolitan critic and translator Fou Lei (1908-66). As one of China's oldest and most distinguished artists in the 1940s and 1950s, Huang Binhong was committed to artistic continuity and reinvigoration of brush-and-ink painting. Fou Lei was a child of the New Culture Movement which repudiated many literati traditions, but reached out to Huang Binhong to discuss the possibilities for contemporary Chinese art amid the tides of war and Communist dictates of socialist realism as the guiding priority for cultural workers. Both were cultural mediators and translators of ideas and cultural expressions. Both had deep appreciation of the common origins of calligraphy and painting, rendering complex feelings with brush and ink. Their intimate artistic conversations over more than a decade depict their alienation and uncertainty amid China's turbulent cultural politics.

Nos héros débarquent désormais au lycée, et le destin a voulu que tous se retrouvent dans le même établissement ! Rei et les autres membres du Kimengumi continuent donc de vivre leur quotidien complètement ravagé aux côtés de Yui, de Chie, d'Ichirô, de la prof Ikari, des bandes des gros bras ou des rebelles...

The College Standard Dictionary of the English Language ...

On nous présente donc Chie et Yui, deux jeunes filles en classe de troisième au collège Ichiô. À la fin de l'année, elle vont devoir passer comme tous les autres, leurs examens d'admission au lycée de leur choix. Rien d'anormal jusque là à part le fait que ce collège n'est pas exactement comme les autres. Elles ont notamment dans leur classe, le Kimengumi, une bande de 5 joyeux débiles et cancre invétérés qui échouent depuis 3 ans à entrer au lycée et redoublent donc chaque année. Rei le chef, est véritable mystère, rien pour lui n'est jamais sérieux. Son second, Gô, est obsédé par le saké et veut devenir catcheur professionnel. Jin ne vit que pour manger, Kiyoshi pour épier les filles et Dai rêve de devenir une femme.

Life Lessons from My Father is a presentation of sayings that my father used as he raised the three of us in Mud Town, Topeka's own black ghetto. The sayings were designed to provide us with the personal and social skills that he understood were required for kids like us to function comfortably individually and publicly. He worked, grounding each of us in our own self-esteem. He lived to see the effect of his efforts, and he was pleased. Customer Review Hal Lockard, The Capital-Journal A former Topekan appeased his daughter by compiling an anecdotal collection of his father's sayings and how they applied to everyday situations. The result can benefit parents and children both. Life Lessons From My Father: Things Dad Used to Say by John Fouts Gardenhire, a 1951 graduate of Topeka High School, turns out to be a historic review of one black family's experience in Topeka's "Mud Town." Fouts grew up with a brother and sister under the guidance of Shirley

Richard Gardenhire at 807 Wood in East Topeka. His book reveals a lot about the elder Gardenhire's education, occupation and optimistic views on life. The project began with a telephone call from Alissa, his daughter in Maplewood, N.J., who told him, "Dad, I want to talk to you." "And when a kid says that it means either they're in jail or they need money," Gardenhire said. He was relieved to learn that she wanted the two of them to write a book recalling of phrases his father and her grandfather, would say. "She talked, and I wrote," Gardenhire said. The finished product came out in about six months, and 19 publishers rejected it before Xlibris put in print in February. The end result is pared down to about 35 sayings, but he offers an additional 25 or so in an addendum for readers wanting more. It's all good advice. Shirley Richard Gardenhire was born in 1891 in Alma, graduated from Kansas State College in Manhattan and worked for the Santa Fe Railway until retiring. He died in Seattle in the 1970s, and his obituary wasn't published in Topeka. The author graduated from The University of Kansas in 1958 and taught English for many years at Laney College in Oakland, Calif. He moved to Maplewood, N.J., to live near Alissa and his grandson. "If there is any kind of heaven after this, it will be peopled with grandchildren," he says. Among the sayings that are treated with explanatory anecdotes are "Read the newspaper," "Be on time," "Study Latin," "Discipline your children" and "It's a poor dog that won't wag his own tail." It makes for easy reading that can be handled a little at a time or all once. Amazon gives it a five-star rating, and it can be ordered from Barnes and Noble Booksellers or Borders Books and Music. "Its something I hope people not only will enjoy but will learn something from it," he said. It's something expectant fathers might want to take a look at. Publisher A Universal Biography College Ruled Color Paperback.
