Scores of talented and dedicated people serve the forensic science community, performing vitally important work. However, they are often constrained by lack of adequate resources, sound policies, and national support. It is clear that change and advancements, both systematic and scientific, are needed in a number of forensic science disciplines to ensure the reliability of work, establish enforceable standards, and promote best practices with consistent application. Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States: A Path Forward provides a detailed plan for addressing these needs and suggests the creation of a new government entity, the National Institute of Forensic Science, to establish and enforce standards within the forensic science community. The benefits of improving and regulating the forensic science disciplines are clear: assisting law enforcement officials, enhancing homeland security, and reducing the risk of wrongful conviction and exoneration.

Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States gives a full account of what is needed to advance the forensic science disciplines, including upgrading of systems and organizational structures, better training, widespread adoption of uniform and enforceable best practices, and mandatory certification and accreditation programs. While this book provides an essential call-to-action for congress and policy makers, it also serves as a vital tool for law enforcement agencies, criminal prosecutors and attorneys, and forensic science educators.

There is perhaps no greater gift one person can give another than to share his or her story. This book is one of those gifts. Moving to A Higher Zip-Code is a heartfelt and honest snapshot of one woman's life. It is the no-holds-barred account of how Deb Brown, RsM, reached her “higher zip-code” — and how you can use what she learned along the way to reach your own. Deb vulnerably shares details of a dysfunctional childhood, addictive relationships and behaviors, dark nights of the soul, family tragedy and betrayal, and more in a voice that is relatable and highly authentic. Like all of us, she stumbles and falls — but she also picks herself up in a way that is both instructional and inspirational. In Moving to A Higher Zip Code, we see Deb at sixty sharing the wisdom and experience that opened her to self-love and self-care, learning to believe and trust in synchronicity and the universe; finding her soul mate; and ultimately discovering inner peace. Knowing that we are never too old to make changes in our life or in finding true love. Accepting daily challenges made her life manageable again. And she chose to live in peace rather than in the turmoil created by her mind. I invite you to tear back the cover of this precious gift and get lost in its pages. With each twist and turn of Deb’s “accidental journey,” and as you face your own shadow and light along the way, I hope you find your own place in the world and a higher zip code of our own.

Mental Capacity Act 2005 code of practice

Radcliffe Publishing
When inspectors said thousands of care home residents were being given the wrong medication - the image of a grotty, poorly run nursing home reared its stereotypical head. How could something so simple as giving a patient their daily dose of tablets be going so wrong, so many times over?

Instructions to Surveyors
The Mental capacity Act 2005 provides a statutory framework for people who lack the capacity to make decisions for themselves, or for people who want to make provision for a time when they will be unable to make their own decisions. This code of practice, which has statutory force, provides information and guidance about how the Act should work in practice. It explains the principles behind the Act, defines when someone is incapable of making their own decisions and explains what is meant by acting in someone's best interests. It describes the role of the new Court of Protection and the role of Independent Mental Capacity Advocates and sets out the role of the Public Guardian. It also covers medical treatment and the way disputes can be resolved.
