Hope Won't Let Go, written by first-time author, Sharon B. Scott, is a collection of inspirational verses and quotes designed to promote encouragement, reassurance, and a revitalized hope, especially among readers who may have been plagued with seasons of despair. The work is divided into five segments inclusive of the following: • Designed to Inspire • The Nature of Things • A Heartfelt Tribute to the African-American Heritage • Passing Thoughts...That Were Worth Hanging Onto • A Proclamation and a Praise! An obvious thread running through the pages of Hope Won't Let Go is that of promoting a sustained hope in the midst of life's many challenges. Through this introductory project, the author's aim is to reach a wide range of audiences and to instill in them a rejuvenated excitement regarding their own dreams and aspirations. It is the author's prayer that after engaging with this work, readers will be encouraged and inspired to rediscover and maintain a lively hope that refuses to let go.

THE BIG DEAL... shows how to develop a stronger relationship with God and more effective spiritual lifestyle by taking small steps that lead to big changes. Been running for Jesus a long time (I'm not tired yet) Been singing for Jesus a long time (I'm not tired yet) Been running by day and praying by night (I'm not tired yet) I've gotta get going, it's a mighty hard fight (No...I'm not tired yet) I've been serving God a long time (I'm not tired yet) I've been living for God a long time (I'm not tired yet) I've been praying to the Lord a long time (I'm not tired yet) It's an uphill journey but all I've got to say is (I'm not tired yet) The old spiritual song lifts you, but you are tired. Or maybe you're bored. You're still going to church. You're still praying. You're still serving. You're still giving. Deep within you, faith remains. But you feel a longing. You're not seeking fireworks. You're not a pew-sitter, safe in some spiritual comfort zone, looking for a thrill from the Lord. Your trust in God is secure. But you feel a longing for something more, deeper, fresher. If you've ignored these innermost feelings thinking they're no big deal, this basic yet dynamic program that Bishop Vashti McKenzie has implemented in more than two hundred churches with astounding results is for you. Individuals who have had many years of Christian life discovered a renewed sense of calling and purpose. Even new believers were invigorated in their faith-building process. Bishop McKenzie prescribes very small changes-such as adding a mere thirty seconds of prayer daily-that lead to radical closeness to God. And building an enjoyable, meaningful relationship with the Almighty doesn't mean striving for perfection. Small steps-but meaningful steps-collectively evolve into intimacy with God. And the big deal result is greater ability to biblically address life challenges. The big deal is that you're even more available to serve family, church, and community: truly in "no ways tired." Increasing spirituality is incremental, not monumental. Mustard-seed-like increases in positive actions (and corresponding decreases in negative ones) yield mountain-moving growth!

Historians have long agreed that women—black and white—were instrumental in shaping the civil rights movement. Until recently, though, such claims have not been supported by easily accessed texts of speeches and addresses. With this first-of-its-kind anthology, Davis W. Houck and David E. Dixon present thirty-nine full-text addresses by women who spoke out while the struggle was at its most intense. Beginning with the Brown decision in 1954 and extending through the Voting Rights Act of 1965, the editors chronicle the unique and important rhetorical contributions made by such well-known activists as Ella Baker, Fannie Lou Hamer, Daisy Bates, Lillian Smith, Mamie Till-Mobley, Lorraine Hansberry, Dorothy Height, and Rosa Parks. They also include speeches from lesser-known but influential leaders such as Della Sullins, Marie Foster, Johnnie Carr, Jane Schutt, and Barbara Posey. Nearly every speech was discovered in local, regional, or national archives, and many are published or transcribed from audiotape here for the first time. Houck and Dixon introduce each speaker and occasion with a headnote highlighting key biographical and background details. The editors also provide a general introduction that places these public addresses in context. Women and the Civil Rights Movement, 1954-1965 gives voice to stalwarts whose passionate orations were vital to every phase of a movement that changed America.

Borrowing from Our Foremothers offers a panorama of women's struggles through artifacts to establish connections between the generations of women's right activists. In a thorough historical retelling of the women's movement from 1848 to 2017, Amy Helene Forss focuses on items borrowed from our innovative foremothers, including cartes de visite, clothing, gavels, sculptures, urns, service pins, and torches. Framing the material culture items within each era's campaigns yields a wider understanding of the women's metanarrative. Studded with relics and ninety-nine oral histories from such women as Rosalynn Carter to Pussyhat Project cocreator Krista Suh, this book contributes an important and illuminating analysis necessary for understanding the development of feminism as well as our current moment. Spiritual Story

This is a book of stories based upon the journey of Africans to America and how the Negro Spiritual was created, used, and connected to plantation life, faith, and finally freedom. The common music or folk music surrounding any people tells their stories: stories that reflect their joys, their struggles, their superstitions, their faith journey, and their sorrow. Songs bear witness to life whether written down or passed down through oral tradition. In my story, the African American Story - it is the spiritual, the ant'em, the ditty, the plantation cries and shouts that express the roots of my soul, the essence of my being, and my circumstance. Somewhere between statutory slavery and the mid-1800s and even beyond the end of the Civil War in 1865, my spiritual story was born, shaped and imbued with my pain, my hope yet unborn and my prayers on bended knee. My song became my way of speaking, my style of preaching, my rhythm in working, my circle game when playing, my manner of shouting at secret prayer-meetings, my sorrow song when in despair, my yard song when mocking my master even in his presence, my code song for escaping and my jubilee song after escaping to freedom by Underground Railroad and Lincoln's Emancipation. My Spiritual Story was written to plant a seed of understanding that would bring about a deeper appreciation of our culture and how we've become what we have become. Whereas you did not live during slavery, nor did I; whereas, we would love to move on into the future with hope, and whereas there seems to be blurred lines between heritage and hatred, you became the benefactors of a wealthy inheritance while we became the benefactors of Jim Crow and disenfranchisement. Yet, we have made some great strides. Despite it all, my song is still beautiful for it symbolizes my journey, my strength, and my determination. My Spiritual Song tells my story when I could not speak it.

The Crisis

By the twentieth century, North Carolina's progressive streak had strengthened, thanks in large part to a growing number of women who engaged in and influenced state and national policies and politics. These women included Gertrude Weil who fought tirelessly for the Nineteenth Amendment, which extended suffrage to women, and founded the state chapter of the League of Women Voters once the amendment was ratified in 1920. Gladys Avery Tillett, an ardent Democrat and supporter of Roosevelt's New Deal, became a major presence in her party at both the state and national levels. Guion Griffis Johnson turned to volunteer work in the postwar years, becoming one of the state's most prominent female civic leaders. Through her excellent education, keen legal mind, and family prominence, Susie Sharp in 1949 became the first woman judge in North Carolina and in 1974 the first woman in the nation to be elected and serve as chief justice of a state supreme court. Throughout her life, the Reverend Dr. Anna Pauline "Pauli" Murray charted a religious, literary, and political path to racial reconciliation on both a national stage and in North Carolina. This is the second of two volumes that together explore the diverse and changing patterns of North Carolina women's lives. The essays in this volume cover the period beginning with women born in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries but who made their greatest contributions to the social, political, cultural, legal, and economic life of the state during the late progressive era through the late twentieth century.
