Ce livre est une sorte de calendrier de l'avent. Pendant les quarante jours qui ont précédé mon quarantième anniversaire, j'ai écrit un texte par jour et par année en m'appuyant chaque jour sur une photographie me mettant en scène de zéro (quelques jours à peine) à trente-neuf ans. Il s'agissait moins de dresser un bilan que de tenter de se réapproprier la vie qui passe, de tisser des fils entre les événements pour apercevoir, espérer, fabriquer une cohérence. Les Gens heureux n'ont pas d'histoire, cette phrase de Tolstoï traînait dans ma tête parce que j'étais heureuse et croyais n'avoir rien vécu. Mon calendrier de l'avent raconte, par le récit de soi qui est nécessairement fiction, comment l'on devient, un caractère et une personne, des rêves et des ambitions, orientés, déterminés, polis par ceux qui nous précèdent et nous accompagnent, aïeux et parents, puis ceux qui nous côtoient et nous forment, camarades, amis, amoureux, enseignants, et tous ces objets qui passent en nous, les films, les tableaux, les livres, les chansons, leurs personnages et leurs auteurs, mais aussi ces événements que nous vivons, l'historique aussi intimement que l'intime, de l'élection d'un président de gauche, à des attentats meurtriers dans le RER, en passant par la chute du mur de Berlin, du premier contact avec la mort à la naissance de nos enfants, en passant par l'unique gifle reçue, la première expérience sexuelle, le premier chagrin d'amour, et le lancinant, l'enlisant quotidien.

Welcome to the colourful world of the Kokeshi, a Japanese inspired French boutique brand that introduces children to a family to traditional Japanese dolls. The Kokeshi were once made from left over pieces of wood, with sculpted hair, and little rounded bodies. Over centuries Kokeshi dolls have been modernised and given colour. Creators have taken more liberties, giving the dolls personalities and beautiful clothing, all the while observing the one founding principle. They are part of a search for beauty and art through simplicity and purity of form. There are many types of Kimono, just as there are many types of Kokeshi, and while they all wear the same style clothing, they all add their very personal touch! Guess the hair styles your favourite Kokeshi has, and peep inside their apartments and see what they're doing on washing day! And what do Kokeshi wear in the bath? Nothing silly! But they do have lovely fluffy towels!
