How does having a baby change things? Now that is an excellent question, which can only be answered by a person who has experienced it. Benfoolery is a daily, semi-autobiographical comic strip through the eyes of a first-time Dad, who tries to do the best that he can to survive parenthood. Benfoolery is an honest, hold-onto-your-seat look into the lives of new parents. This comic strip explores how parents must learn to constantly adapt to the needs (and temperaments) of their ever-changing baby. It's a great read for people who are expecting or wanting to have kids, or for those just wanting to have a chuckle. The comic is relatable to all families young and old. Enjoy!

Drive Egmont Childrens Books

The New York Times bestseller that gives readers a paradigm-shattering new way to think about motivation from the author of When: The Scientific Secrets of Perfect Timing Most people believe that the best way to motivate is with rewards like money—the carrot-and-stick approach. That's a mistake, says Daniel H. Pink (author of To Sell Is Human: The Surprising Truth About Motivating Others). In this provocative and persuasive new book, he asserts that the secret to high performance and satisfaction-at work, at school, and at home—is the deeply human need to direct our own lives, to learn and create new things, and to do better by ourselves and our world. Drawing on four decades of scientific research on human motivation, Pink exposes the mismatch between what science knows and what business does—and how that affects every aspect of life. He examines the three elements of true motivation—autonomy, mastery, and purpose—and offers smart and surprising techniques for putting these into action in a unique book that will change how we think and transform how we live.
