This pioneering work traces the emergence of the modern and contemporary art of Muslim South Asia in relation to transnational modernism and in light of the region's intellectual, cultural, and political developments. Art historian Iftikhar Dadi here explores the art and writings of major artists, men and women, ranging from the late colonial period to the era of independence and beyond. He looks at the stunningly diverse artistic production of key artists associated with Pakistan, including Abdur Rahman Chughtai, Zainul Abedin, Shakir Ali, Zubeida Agha, Sadequain, Rasheed Araeen, and Naiza Khan. Dadi shows how, beginning in the 1920s, these artists addressed the challenges of modernity by translating historical and contemporary intellectual conceptions into their work, reworking traditional approaches to the classical Islamic arts, and engaging the modernist approach towards subjective individuality in artistic expression. In the process, they dramatically reconfigured the visual arts of the region. By the 1930s, these artists had embarked on a sustained engagement with international modernism in a context of dizzying social and political change that included decolonization, the rise of mass media, and developments following the national independence of India and Pakistan in 1947. Bringing new insights to such concepts as nationalism, modernism, cosmopolitanism, and tradition, Dadi underscores the powerful impact of transnationalism during this period and highlights the artists' growing embrace of modernist and contemporary artistic practice in order to address the challenges of the present era.

Seemab started writing Urdu Ghazals at a time when the Urdu Ghazal was evolving. New themes and newer compositions were finding their way into this traditional art form, and Seemab played a vital role in its evolution. Along with ghazals, Seemab, by now, had also started writing Nazms. He was paying more attention to his nazmiya shayari, as it gave him more scope to present his ideas. Seemab's body of work is tremendous. His poetry encompasses a vast range of emotions, and ideas. His manner of versification (tarz-e-taghaful) is simple and informal and is very appealing. His poetry also has an eloquence and appropriate use of idioms and phrases, all of which entices the reader. Umr-e-daraz maang ke layi thi chaar din do aarzoo mein kat gaye do intezaar mein For a long life I begged, and four days I could negotiate two days of which I spent in pining, and two in wait Seemab was a God-fearing man and believed in the goodness of mankind. In his poetry, one identifies a distinct Sufi style. While most Sufi poets of that era were disciples (murid) of a spiritual teacher (murshid) and wrote poetry in praise of their murshid, Seemab's Sufism addressed the almighty directly, especially in his Nazmia Shayari. In his lifetime Seemab wrote and published about 300 books. Some more were published after his death. The magazine, Shair, that he started in 1930 is still being published by his grandsons, making it the oldest Urdu literary magazine in publication. One can easily say that Seemab is one of the foremost poets from the pre-modern era of Urdu poetry.

Have you ever been enchanted by the spoken cadence of an Urdu couplet but wished you could fully understand its nuances? Have you wanted to engage with a ghazal more deeply but were daunted by its mystifying conventions? Are you confused between a qataa and a rubaai, or a musadda and a marsiya? In Urdu Poetry, Raza Mir offers a fresh, quirky and accessible entry point for neophytes seeking to enhance their enjoyment of this vibrant canon—from the poems of legends like Mir Taqi Mir and Mirza Ghalib to the lyrics of contemporary game changers like Javed Akhtar and Gulzar. Raza Mir's translation not only draws out the zest and pathos of these timeless verses, but also provides pithy insights and colourful trivia that will enable readers to fully embrace this world.
