This book contains the rich history of a people struggling to attain freedom, justice and equality, which is most defined by the Selma, AL Right To Vote Movement. From the shores of Africa to the Americas this book explores the people, through pictures, articles, quotes, poems, timelines and more. Providing the history of nonviolence as applied to the Selma

Movement from the unique perspective of the strategist and nonviolent scientist James L. Bevel. Tong Sing Simon and Schuster North Country: A Pedagogical Almanac is a memoir-in-essays about teaching and family life in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. The book follows the cycle of seasons in this remote and beautiful place by the waters of Lake Superior during the years in which the author finds a place there. It's also a look at higher education on the razor's edge at a tiny and struggling liberal arts college. Above all, the memoir is about a life lived alongside books and what they might teach us about how to love, parent, mentor, and care for others. "Carolyn Dekker has crafted the most original of books, tangling up memoir with literary criticism, nature writing with social critique, regionalist poetics with profound meditations on love, life, and justice. North Country gives new life to the oldest words in the trade--you can't put this book down--for it asks readers to linger and to savor, slow-longing for the next words, the ones that tenderly knot keen observation to brilliant insight."--Phil Deloria, author of Playing Indian and American Studies: A User's Guide "At once a bracing portrait of place, a radically honest accounting of the self, and a delicate excavation of the crisis landscape of higher education, Carolyn Dekker's North Country: A Pedagogical Almanac illuminates the power of tenderness in a broken world. How might a moment of encounter-- with a student, a lover, an animal, a landscape scarred by its industrial past--function as an act of repair? How might our time in the literary worlds we share fortify us and orient us toward beauty and justice? Dekker dares to take up these questions, and the book she creates is a place we should linger. I will be pressing North Country into people's hands for years to
